Delivery/Product Saturday 1st July

What is Delivery/Product Management?

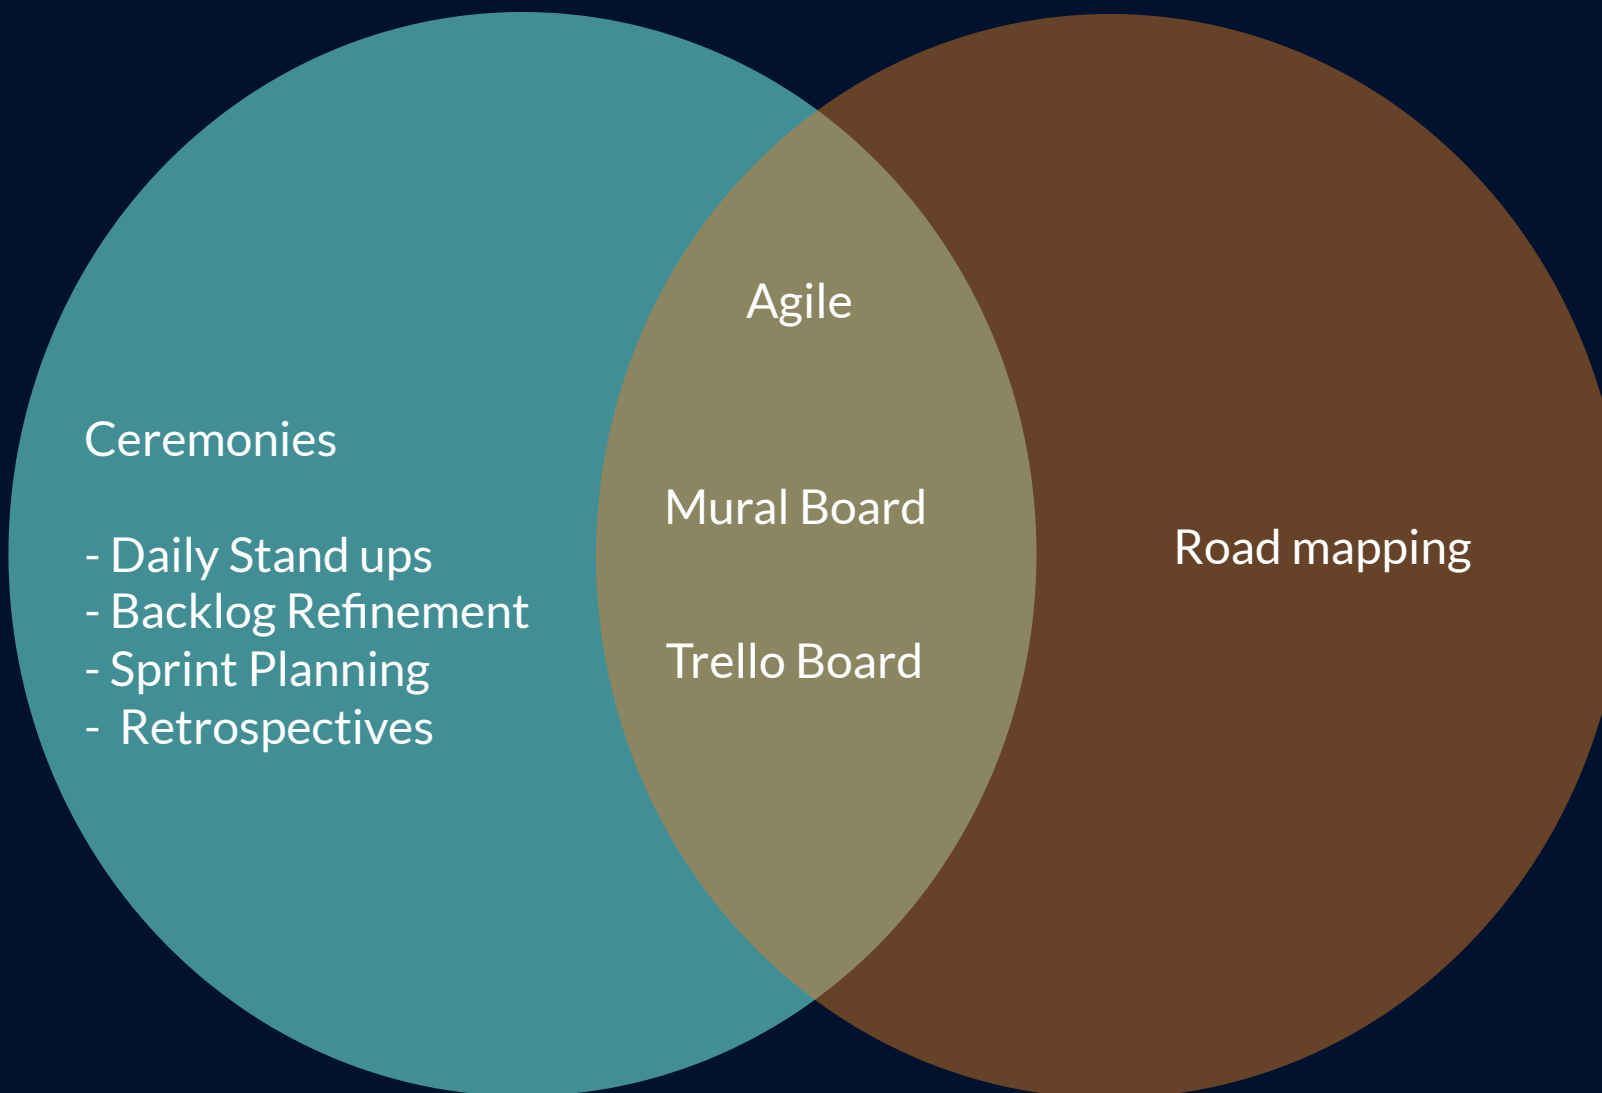

Delivery is a type of project management. The Delivery Manager is responsible for helping the team deliver their product. They are responsible for timescales, tracking and monitoring, motivating the team, team health, liaising with stakeholders and facilitating ceremonies. They help create an environment that will allow the team to bring the product to life.

A Product Manager is responsible for the development of a product. They are responsible for making core decisions for the team. They will identify what the team should prioritise and they work closely with the delivery and business analyst leads.

Both roles use agile methodology to deliver the end product. They are motivating, positive thinkers who have the ability to break down large or complex tasks.

UX/UI Design

Saturday 16th July

What is UX/UI Design?

UX Design is concerned with a user's experience with a product and company.

UI Design is concerned with the user's interface, how an application might look.

The designer will ensure that the product looks right and interacts correctly with the user.

For example:-

If Apple request an app that will allow people to upload a profile and buy a product. The designer would ensure that the layout of the app is easy to navigate, looks aesthetically pleasing and makes sense to the user.

This person is particular about how platforms look and how easy it is to navigate. They care about how people feel when using platforms.
